WHEN: Sunday, April 12th, 2015

NOTES: As we're filing permits for the 2015 Sunday Streets events, we have to show we've got all of the resources to create eight successful events - that means money and volunteers. Last year 300 volunteers donated over 1,500 hours of their time to the program. This year, we've added more neighborhood outreach shifts and new event setup and breakdown shifts to make each event as smooth, safe, and pleasant as possible for participants and neighbors. We estimate we'll need at least 2,000 volunteer hours to reach that goal. Will you stand up for Sunday Streets? Sign the volunteer pledge below to help us demonstrate that thousands of people love Sunday Streets and are willing to help make it happen. Most volunteer shifts are just 2-3 hours long, and event volunteers get a free lunch! It takes hundreds of volunteers each year to make Sunday Streets safe and fun for everyone. How will you make sure Sunday Streets 2015 is a success?

WHERE: UC Hastings College of Law, Alumni Reception Center

WHEN: Thursday, March 19, 2015 2:30-9:00pm Registration 2:00-2:30

NOTES: Recent events nationwide have brought police-community relations into the limelight, raising serious questions about accountability, over enforcement, and abuse of force, particularly in the context of race. As communities, police departments, lawmakers, advocates, and activists struggle to make sense of recent casualties of police abuse--Oscar Grant, Michael Brown, Eric Garner, and others--serious questions about policies and practices become important. What are the limits of discretion in law enforcement? To what extent can racial biases be addressed through legal processes? What are the boundaries of exclusion and apprehension in public space? Do different spaces--public transit stations, the street, neighborhoods--differ in the ability to exclude and profile people in them? Should policing power be extended to neighborhood watches and private patrols? Is increased visibility--lapel cameras, cellular phones, and social media--a viable solution? How to make sense of accountability and enforcement mechanisms? These issues beg for a knowledgeable, high-quality conversation, which Hastings is uniquely positioned to host. The conference will feature academics, law enforcement agents, civil rights organizations, lawyers and community activists, in conversation about the future of policing in the aftermath of tragedy, community outrage, and calls for reform. It is the kind of conversation that the Bay Area, and the nation, needs and deserves.

WHO: The Bayview Opera House

WHAT: Needs Your Input on a New Mural Project

WHERE: The survey can be found and completed at: <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/YLDZYK6>

CONTACT: Ivy Anderson, Event and Volunteer Coordinator, Office: (415)824-0386, ivy@bvoh.org

NOTES: The Bayview Opera House has teamed up with the San Francisco Department of the Environment to paint a mural that will express our vision for an environmentally sustainable Bayview, and will educate residents about properly disposing of their used motor oil. Since July 2008, over 1,300 cases of illegal oil dumping in D10 have been reported to 311, despite there being many free and legal dumping sites nearby. Illegal dumping is contributing to the already rampant pollution of our district, and we are ready to tackle this issue head on. Once a final location and design are decided upon, muralist Cameron Moberg will teach a 3 week course on mural making with local teens, some of whom will be hired to help him execute the final mural. This will be a great opportunity to engage local youth in the arts, the environment, and the community. We need the community's input on this project. What do our neighbors already know about oil pollution and how to prevent it? Where should this mural be located in order to reach the most people and to stop the biggest offenders? What ideas and imagery should be included in the mural? Can you take 5 minutes to fill out our online community survey? And please pass this link along to your friends and neighbors here in Bayview! We will also be gathering input during our upcoming series of 3rd on Third events, at local high schools, at community events, and out on Third St. To stay updated on this project and the many ways to get involved, leave your name and email at the end of the survey and I will add you to our mailing list.
